Before discussing the observations and comments of the observer, the instructor should be asked to reflect and debrief about the observed class meeting. The following questions may serve as useful prompts for this reflection:

1. Did the class proceed as planned? Why or why not?

2. Did students respond as you anticipated?

3. How did you feel during the class?

4. Did the students learn what you wanted them to learn? How do you know?

5. What did you learn about teaching from this class?

6. Based on this class, what do you see as areas that need improvement?

7. If you could re-teach the class again tomorrow, what would you do differently?
